Neil Barr was the founder of the New Zealand Farm Forestry Association. He was a keen observer, practical innovator, convincing communicator via both the written and spoken word, and above all a committed tree enthusiast with the happy knack of being able to pass on the enthusiasm. Neil readily related to like-minded others and used their knowledge and experience to augment his own. The book combines shrewd observations with a compilation of facts, enlivened with anecdotes and an underlying wit. The book is most useful for growers of eucalypts in moist warm to cool temperate climates similar to that of New Zealand.
